 Fresh Ho-Ka Turkeys

No Chemicals • No Defrosting

Ho-Ka Turkeys are grown in DeKalb County. Open, airy sheds prepare the birds for their move to open ranges when they are six weeks old. When the time comes, they are herded to the plant on foot. This eliminates the stress on the birds created when hauled for hours on a large truck. The result is better quality meat.

The birds are grown on a low-energy feed consisting mainly of corn. They are never fed hormones or antibiotics for growth promotion.

The most important factor that insures high quality is the tender loving care these birds get during the time they are on the farm. The same people handle these birds from day one, through all the process to the delivery of the dressed product. This fact encourages us to do the very best every day to produce a bird that we can sell with pride.
